

The present Indiana Telephone Privacy Law protections should remain intact. Prior to the enactment, my phone rang from 8:00 AM until 6:00PM. There was no escape from the constant intrusion. I subscribed to "caller ID" trying to filter out some of the junk calls, but even with that the phone would still ring. Since the privacy law has been in effect I feel like I have been released from prison. The number of junk calls comming in now is minimal.

I am puzzled, even troubled, as to why FCC would even consider interferring with something that has improved the quality of my life. As the old saying goes, " If it ain't broke, don't fix it."
